

MARINA YACHTING

Marina Yachting Womenswear Collection S/S 2010

The sea also takes on an urban dimension. Masculine outfits are redesigned to fit feminine shapes. The nautical spirit embraces daywear, from the city to the beach, from the office to weekend escapades

ARCHIVIO

Next to traditional blue, there is white fading to off-white. The decorations are sailing ropes and the spinnaker logo with rubberized finishes. The Pickot jacket comes also in white, with a detachable hood. Or, in white with contrasting blue buttons, there is the Vega jacket, smaller and trapezium-shaped. For boat trips, you can wear Pegasus, the mini caban jacket with metal buttons. The Doria and Nelson jackets, masculine blazer jackets reshaped for women, are waist-tight and slim. There are four types of trousers, one for each fit – the highlight is the nautical model, with buttons on the sides and on the waistline. Knitwear has "gas-light" yarns for greater lightness, trapezium lines and bateau necklines. Sleeves are usually three quarters, but for a sleeveless top with slits on its sides fastened by cord criss-crossing. Bias binding in crochet cord, hand-sewn loops and English ribs with anchor-shaped embroideries applied make a difference.

MACRO LOGO

Young and dynamic, it dares to offer re-sized volumes and casual models with feminine touches. The Sailor is close-fitting, with a detachable vest and an elastic band fastened under the breast. The short bomber jacket is active, in nylon with Pvc striped patch and ivory-coloured enameled buttons. The parka jacket is in coated cotton canvas with prism effect, lending a new light to the fabric. The waistline is fastened by an elastic drawstring. In trousers, the focus is on shorts - technical shorts in nylon, Bermuda shorts with pleats. And then low-slung five-pocket trousers. The skirts are slim and have "puffed up" embroideries in relief. Polo-shirts have fastened plunging necklines and details in reflecting patch. Accessories include caps and bags with handles.

BANCHINA

Colours. There is an extremely wide range of them, from sail red to English grass green, from sun and gold yellows to electric blue. Details are pure sailing zig-zag stitches, anchor-shaped embroideries and contrasting profiles. Stretch mini-skirts and striped jersey short dresses are for daywear and eveningwear, with sailing rope/tape blend finishes. Polo-shirts have lurex threads and "light" hand-sewn patches. This is urban style with a nautical flavour.